Your First AI Music Video: Quick-Start Checklist

From photo upload to a client-ready export — the exact order to work in, and the quality checks to run before you deliver anything.

Before You Generate

- CHECK: Pick ONE clear, front-facing photo with good light. Blurry or side-angle photos are the number-one cause of weak face consistency.
- CHECK: Write your song brief in one sentence: who it is for, the occasion, and the feeling (happy, romantic, funny).
- CHECK: Choose the genre before the language. Genre drives the vocal style, and vocal style is what clients notice first.
- CHECK: List 3 personal details to weave into the lyrics (names, places, dates). Personal details are what make an AI song feel custom-made.

Generating the Video

- CHECK: Generate the first version end-to-end without tweaking. You need a full baseline before you can judge anything.
- CHECK: Watch the whole video once with the sound ON and your eyes on the mouth. Lip-sync drift usually appears in fast lyric lines first.
- CHECK: Listen once with your eyes closed. If the vocal sounds robotic in the chorus, regenerate the song before touching the visuals.
- CHECK: Check the face at three points: opening scene, middle scene, final scene. The face should read as the same person in all three.

Before You Deliver or Post

- CHECK: Export at the highest quality setting available, then watch the exported file — not the preview — one full time.
- CHECK: Confirm names and words are spelled correctly in any on-screen text. Clients forgive AI quirks; they do not forgive a misspelled name.
- CHECK: Save the project files and your settings. A happy client will ask for a second video, and consistency wins the repeat order.
- CHECK: Deliver inside the 30-day guarantee window of your own purchase, so any tool problem is still covered while you learn.

Tip: work through this document with your first real project open beside it. A finished, imperfect video teaches you more than ten tutorials.
